Sperber

Devorah Sperber was born in 1961 and raised in Detroit, Michigan until the age of ten, when she moved to Denver, Colorado. From 1979 to 1981, she attended the Art Institute of Colorado, Denver, and in 1987, she received her BA from Regis University, Colorado. Shortly after graduation, Sperber was asked to include her figurative stone sculptures and related bronze castings in a national exhibition on the Holocaust victim Anne Frank, which helped in the emergence of her career.

Devorah Sperber has exhibited in numerous institutions across the United States, including Mass MoCA, North Adams, Massachusetts (2008); the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, University of Vermont, Burlington (2007); the Montclair Art Museum, New Jersey (2004). In 2007, she had a one-person exhibition, The Eye of the Artist: The Work of Devorah Sperber, at the Brooklyn Museum of Art, New York.
